

JAMES LIGHTFOOT Our Lifelong Learner

We would like to congratulate James Lightfoot for receiving A Celebration of Lifelong Learning Award from the London Council for Adult Education. The presentation ceremony was held on May 6, 2008 at the Wolf Performance Hall. Jim has been a student all his life. He has been involved with volunteering and with many different programs, as well as leisure activities, at Hutton House and through a number of other agencies.

When he was younger his ambition was to be a researcher. He likes to do research projects, book reports, computer assignments and janitorial work. He believes in people and in himself. He likes to make positive achievements and works hard. He thinks the most important things are people and caring for the environment.

In class Jim can be counted on to work quickly and accurately, and then to go about three steps further than expected. He is always enthusiastic and very encouraging to his classmates. Jim has said that he regards learning as his life work.

Congratulations James from Adult Education and all of Hutton House.

Jim receives his plaque from Sally Carlton
